

Middle Grade Historical Fiction

The streets of Chicago in 1886 are full of turmoil. Striking workers clash with police...illness and injury lurk around every corner...and twelve-year-old Addie must find her way through it all.

Torn between her gruff Papa—who owns a hat shop and thinks the workers should be content with their American lives—and her beloved Uncle Chaim—who is active in the protests for the eight-hour day—Addie struggles to understand her topsy-turvy world, while also keeping her family intact.

Set in a Jewish neighborhood of Chicago during the days surrounding the Haymarket Affair, this novel vividly portrays one immigrant family's experience, while also eloquently depicting the timeless conflict between the haves and the have-nots.

A reading guide with discussion questions, read-alikes, and research resources is available on the Allium Press website.

---

Maud Macrory Powell comes from a family of writers. She was born and raised in Washington, DC. She studied comparative religion in college and environmental studies in graduate school. She now lives in rural Oregon with her family, where they run an organic farm and she teaches at Oregon State University. Her essay “The Fruits of My Labor” was published in the anthology Greenhorns: The Next Generation of American Farmers. This is her debut novel.

---

Advance praise for City of Grit and Gold:

“Powell brings this historical event to life with admirable attention to detail. A well-rounded collection of characters offer opposing perspectives of the events and life in Chicago at that time. Young readers will grow along with Addie as she learns about the hardships of poverty and the complexity of politics...A timely and potent portrait of an important moment in U.S. history. Recommended for fans of ‘Dear America.’” —School Library Journal

“City of Grit and Gold is an ideal pick for teachers and librarians who may want to use the work to supplement lessons on American history or have meaningful discussions about rights, immigration, and protesting.” —Foreword Reviews

“A worthy introduction to an important piece of history.” —Kirkus Reviews

---

Trade Paperback • ISBN 978-0-9967558-5-6 • $16.99

Ebook • ISBN 978-0-9967558-6-3 • $6.99

JUVENILE FICTION /Historical/United States/19th Century

appropriate for ages 9–12 and above

5.5" x 8.5" • 164 pages

Available through Amazon, Ingram, Baker & Taylor, Overdrive, etc.

---

ALLIUM PRESS OF CHICAGO • 1530 Elgin Avenue • Forest Park, IL 60130

www.alliumpress.com • 708-689-9323 • info@alliumpress.com